

5. Punitive structural barriers to access the court.

- A May 16, 2025 order imposed a $250.00 filing bond in the custody case, that has functioned as a financial gate against my ability to bring forth necessary motions, especially after the same PPO/custody proceedings contributed to my job loss and housing instability and loss of my parenting time with my son.

6. Refusal to recuse despite a developed record of bias.

- On October 29, 2025, I orally motioned to Disqualify Judge McNeill live during the 3rd continued custody hearing in relation to the ex-parte suspension of my parenting time, detailing the pattern of one-sided rulings, remarks, and irregular handling of evidence. She refused to recuse and continues to preside over both the PPO and custody matters.

Taken together, this pattern erodes public confidence, treats me not only differently from the opposing party but criminally and disrespectfully, and—in my view—violates the canons requiring impartiality, avoidance of ex parte communications, and a fair opportunity to be heard, especially given that Ms. Watson is an employee of the Kent County Prosecutors office, Family Court Division as a caseworker.

III. DETAILED FACTUAL BACKGROUND AND TIMELINE

The complete chronology is set out in Appendix A – Master Timeline of PPO, Custody, and Related Proceedings in Pigors v. Watson, which consolidates events from the PPO docket, custody docket, police reports, and hearing dates. Below is a narrative summary of key episodes, with emphasis on the judge’s conduct.

A. Background: Origin and Use of the PPO

1. Initial PPO obtained in 2023 based on extreme and unproven allegations.

- In 2023, Emily Watson obtained a PPO against me in Case No. 2023-5907-PP, alleging poisoning and other serious conduct that did not result in any criminal charges or substantiated findings by emergency responders or law enforcement.
- Emergency responders, when called, did not find injuries, ongoing danger, or evidence supporting criminal prosecution. Despite the lack of
