

- Notice provisions informing the other party how to object; and
 - A prompt hearing and resolution of the dispute within a defined timeframe if an objection is filed.
- Michigan appellate decisions emphasize that even when ex parte orders are initially justified, the court must hold a hearing and address the child's best interests within a reasonable time, and that failure to comply with MCR 3.207's notice and hearing requirements is error. (FindLaw Case Law)
 - In my case, an ex parte order completely suspending parenting time remained in effect for approximately three months before a full evidentiary hearing occurred, despite my objection and repeated requests, and without detailed best-interest findings during the extended suspension.
5. Canon 3(A)(3) – Patience, dignity, and courtesy; fair opportunity to be heard.
- Muting my microphone, cutting off objections, and telling me not to file additional materials because they would not be considered, particularly where the other side had counsel, contradicts the duty to treat litigants with patience, dignity, and courtesy, and to ensure a fair opportunity to be heard.
6. Canon 3(C) and MCR 2.003 – Duty to recuse when impartiality may reasonably be questioned. (vLex)
- Canon 3(C) and MCR 2.003 require disqualification where a judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned, even if the judge believes they can be fair.
 - A reasonable observer, reviewing this record of one-sided evidentiary rulings, ex parte practices, punitive bond requirements, and dismissive treatment of a pro se parent, would in my view question whether Judge McNeill can remain impartial in my cases.

In short, this is not a complaint about a single ruling or isolated comment. It is about a systemic pattern over multiple years, across both PPO and custody cases, that appears to violate Canon 1, Canon 2, and Canon 3, and that has severely harmed my parental relationship and public confidence in the Muskegon family court.
